MULLY

About my process... painting for me is like going into a meditative state, everything else around me blocked out and I focus on the details of my art. I like to start new paintings, I love the energy of a new painting, the not knowing how it will end up. And then abandoned, for now, to start another new piece at my next chance to create. Once I have several paintings in this abandoned state, I reclaim them and paint them all together at the same time.

DANI PAPA

Dani Papanikolaou (or Papa for short) is a mixed media painter and sketchbook artist that explores saturation and line in a variety of forms, usually with nude figures as his vehicle for expression. Papa's style and aesthetic is inspired by urban tribalism, Neo-Expressionism, abstraction, action painters, and street art, with an exploration in mark-making and color dissonance.

Juliana Versari

My artistic style is influenced by the great masters that came before us, paving the way for innovation in the art world. Creating artwork from subconscious mind aims to revolutionize the human experience, taking the ordinary and making them extraordinary. An artist becomes a translator of emotion and spirit, creating something that cannot be explained in words.

Teryl Brzeski

Raised in New Jersey, Teryl was drawn to art from a very early age. Throughout childhood, her most rewarding learning experience was through private weekly instruction, where she attributes a large part of her artistic growth. After college, Teryl continued working from home for several years, before taking her studies to Paris France. She spent three weeks studying and painting on the streets and bridges of Paris through Parson's Plein Air Painting course with her daughter. Personal experiences and strong design and sensitivity to visual balance are the driving forces behind her works.
